Eric	McClellan	Park, Neighborhood	All of the above	Revise the definition and standards to accommodate neighborhood serving facilities that can be co-located with these parks, such as a community service center/facility or multi-purpose building. This is particularly critical for CCRT areas, which typically have no other land resources to introduce needed services and facilities. Note that the current definition accurately reflects that such parks are developed according to the demands and character of the specific neighborhoods that they serve, which may necessarily include co-located facilities to serve community residents. Eric	McClellan	Park, Public	Use Definition	Expand to expressly include and encompass all co-located recreation facilities that collectively compose a Public Park, such that each individual building/use that alone might be classified as a principal use is not distinguished from the Public Park use classification. Burt Aaronson South County Regional Park (Control Nos. 1987-059 and 2007-012) serves as a prime example, as an amphitheatre and golf course components of the program were permitted and developed under the Public Park classification as opposed to the approval process for those particular uses as if stand-alone facilities. Similar examples in support of this very same approach exist throughout the County.
